A Message from County Executive Marc Elrich

August 14, 2020

Some of you may not know that I was an elementary school teacher for 17 years before I moved into fulltime local government. So I understand the importance of in-person learning, I understand kids in schools, and I know people are eager to get our students back to classes. So am I. But I also have been watching the data every day and consulting with our public health experts.

That is why I supported the decision of our Public Health Officer, Dr. Travis Gayles, to issue a health directive that private schools in our County could not open for in-person learning until at least Oct. 1. (Our public school system had already decided to open with virtual learning only for the first semester.) That directive provoked a lawsuit, an outcry from many parents and others and criticism from Maryland Governor Larry Hogan. Because of multiple actions by the State, Dr. Gayles rescinded his order, but his concerns about schools opening for in-person instruction remain.

The level of community transmission is still too high to safely start in-person classes. When European countries restarted in-person classes, their daily infection rate was averaging two new cases per 100,000 residents. Current daily infection rates in Montgomery County are running almost five times higher. When Governor Hogan made the decision to stop in-person learning this past spring, we were identifying only four new cases a day for the entire County—and now we are running more than 70 cases per day. There also are other metrics that our public health experts look at to determine what can safely reopen. I want to emphasize that there is no one metric—no one magical number—that will let us know that it is safe to resume activities. Many different issues and metrics must be considered.

I know some nonpublic schools believe they can keep students within the well-known guidelines that include proper social distancing, wearing face coverings and constantly washing hands. I remain deeply concerned about the loss of every day of instruction. I want nothing more than in-person classes to start again. But I also want every child, every teacher, every staff member and all of their families to remain safe and healthy. Unfortunately, even with all our common effort and sacrifices, we are not ready to safely restart classes. Science, data and concern for public health will dictate our decisions. Despite requests to the State beginning two weeks ago, we continue to await their guidelines for reopening schools. We will use those guidelines to help schools in their plans for the fall, and we hope that all will proceed with utmost caution and not rush a return to in-person classes.

I also would like to let you know that testing at multiple County sponsored sites has been temporarily suspended. Our website has a link to other test sites around the county.

In addition, I wanted to address the upcoming elections. The way we vote this fall will be quite different from what we are used to. First, I would urge everyone to vote by mail. You can request an application online and you also will be receiving an application to request a ballot.

Please: if you are able, request a mail-in ballot rather than an internet link. The internet link is important for those overseas and for certain special populations, but ballots received via internet link must be hand counted. And hand counting is time consuming and particularly difficult during this pandemic.

It is important to vote and easier to vote via mail, but request the “in the mail” ballot choice, not the “through email” ballot. Every registered voter should be receiving an application for mail in ballot by the end of the month. Also, know there will be drop boxes for your “in the mail” ballot placed in locations throughout Montgomery County when it is time to return the ballot.

I will share more information with you in the coming weeks about the election process, but for now, the most important information to know is to request an “in the mail” ballot on your application.

Again, thank you for your understanding. Stay healthy and keep following the guidelines. Your actions are making a difference – please keep it up.
